

Anti-human trafficking education guide available

Ohio Attorney General's Human Trafficking Commission and the University of Dayton's Human Rights Center have released a free online manual that can be used by schools, youth counselors, after-school programs and anti-human trafficking organizations to assist in developing anti-human trafficking education for children.

The Human Trafficking Prevention Education Guidance for Implementation of Youth Programs manual, aimed at middle and high school students, can be presented in one or two hours or class periods depending on the setting. Not included as a part of state curriculum standards, these guidelines, resources and best practices for anti-human trafficking can be woven into most classes. Read more...
